

Colonial Experiences and Their Legacies in Southeast Asia

Institute Bibliography

Each of the presenters for the Institute is being asked to provide readings that will provide background or articulate themes that they will be addressing in each of their sessions. These readings will be posted to an Institute website for electronic access and should be accessible by mid-July.

Prior to coming to Honolulu, it would be useful to get a general historical overview of Southeast Asia. Here are some suggestions. The books by Reid and Owen have a deeper historical base, but also look closely at colonialism and its aftermath.

- Acharya, Amitav. The Making of Southeast Asia: International Relations of a Region. Expanded edition. Singapore: ISEAS and Cornell University, 2012. Widely praised because it links history with the present.
- Dayley, Robert and Clark D. Neher, Southeast Asia in the New International Era. Boulder, CO: Westview Press, 2013. This goes through country by country, and in successive revised editions has been a standard text for many years.
- Kingsbury, Damien. Politics in Contemporary Southeast Asia: Authority, Democracy and Political Change. London: Routledge, 2017. This also goes through country by country, and is a very recent coverage.
- Owen, Norman, ed. The Routledge Handbook of Southeast Asian History. London: Routledge, 2014. This may be in your library. It contains short chapters on a range of topics, including a long section on political history, that includes colonialism and the aftermath.
- Reid, Anthony. A History of Southeast Asia: Critical Crossroads. London: Wiley, 2016.

For your flights over, you might consider one of the following:

- Pramoedya Ananta Toer's Buru Quartet, is a stunning set of four novels, composed in prison, that span the colonial, independence, Japanese occupation and post-colonial nation-building eras of Indonesia, with keen attention to the tensions between normative ideals and lived realities. The best of the four novels is This Earth of Mankind, which has been assigned for the institute.
- George Orwell's Burmese Days, first published in 1934, reflects the personal and disturbing experience of Orwell himself, who spend 5 years as a police officer in Burma in the waning days of colonialism
- Dumb Luck: A Novel, by Vũ Trọng Phụng, is a bitter satire set in Vietnam during the late colonial era that follows the absurd life of a street-smart vagabond and charts how class and gender relations are radically transformed by the growth of colonial capitalism.
- No Harvest but a Thorn, by Shahnun Ahmad. This post-independence era novel is an exposition of peasant struggle, a gruesome celebration of the rural Malay livelihood and its associated pitfalls. Seen in the historical context of a newly independent Malaysia and contemporaneous discourses around 'modernization' and 'underdevelopment', the anxiety that characterizes the novel's tone takes on a broader significance.

- Anthony Burgess, The Long Day Wanes: A Malayan Trilogy, which includes Time for a Tiger (1956), The Enemy in the Blanket (1958), and Beds in the East (1959). Burgess was a teacher in Malaya during the Emergency, when the process of decolonization faced a major challenge from the Malayan Communist Party
